 1 MINUTE

Globally, the recent Coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak has caused significant concerns and far-reaching safety measures. At Finnius we have also take appropriate mitigating measures. Our attorneys and staff members are working from home as much as possible over the next few weeks. Still, at least one of us will be in the office at office hours. Physical meetings in the office are postponed until further notice. It goes without saying that we can have conference call meetings.

This ensures that our services can continue and that we limit any risks of cross-contamination to a minimum. We will remain fully available and trust that our service to you is not disrupted.

We will closely monitor the situation and the developments in the financial markets and within financial regulatory supervision. We remain fully available for any questions that you may have.
